Interesting Meeting Held

(Review Correspondent.)
KEATING, Oct. 26.—There was a good attendance of members at the regular meeting of the South Saanich Women's Institute, held on Thursday evening, Mrs. Sutton presiding. Several visitors also were present. Good reports were received from the various committees. It was decided to assist the Keating school in the purchase of a piano. Mrs. Nimmo gave a demonstration on icing cakes and instructed the members on the use of the icing tubes in making fancy designs. Mrs. Henderson Lawrie and Mrs. Nimmo will be the delegates from the Institute to the Island District Conference, which takes place next week. A Halloween entertainment will be given by the Institute at the Temperance Hall on Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Wollen are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, born at St. Joseph's Hospital, Victoria, on Thursday morning, Oct. 20.

Mr. and Mrs. Henderson Lawrie and daughters, Aletta and Lola, spent Sunday in Victoria, as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Colby and family. Mr. F. Preston, of Victoria, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Gold.

Jolly Evening Spent By All

The Sidney Social Club commenced its series of winter entertainments last Tuesday evening with a filitary five hundred drive. Owing to the storm that had raged all day the attendance was not as large as expected, but those present were well pleased with the evening's entertainment afforded them.

Great credit is due to the president of the Club, Mrs. P. N. Tester, Mrs. E. F. Lesage and Mrs. McLeod for the comfortable arrangement of the clubroom, there being a number of small tables with a large palm to set off the room, and the electric lights with colored shades all combined to give the room a very cosy appearance.

The winners of the first prize were Mrs. G. McMullen, Mrs. J. McLeod, Mr. V. Henn and Mr. W. Crossley. Consolation prizes were won by Mrs. R. Brethour, Mrs. F. Forneri, Mr. Geo. Dickson and Mr. Wesley Coxwell.

Quite a number of members have been enrolled in this club, which is non denominational, and the members are looking forward to a very enjoyable and successful season.

The next meeting of the Club will be held tomorrow evening at 7 o'clock, at the club room, Beacon avenue, for the purpose of arranging for the next social evening. Mrs. P. N. Tester, president, will be pleased to furnish particulars to those interested.

Telephone Rates Lower

The meeting of the Board of Railway Commissioners, held in Victoria last Monday at the City Hall, was attended by representatives of the Associated Boards of Trade of Vancouver Island. Mrs. G. I. Warren, president, Mr. G. H. Walton, vice president, and Mr. W. H. Dawes, secretary, being present. The question of reduction of freight rates was discussed, and the Board went on record in support of the action of the Attorney General, through Mr. D. G. McGree, pressing for a reduction of freight rates. Mr. Warren and Mr. Walton spoke in support, stating that business had been strangled by the excessive rates.

The question of a ten per cent increase in telephone rates was taken up by Mr. Warren and the chairman of the Board in reply stated the increase was only applicable to the five districts requested by the telephone company in their application, and would not be applied to the whole of the company's service. In reply to a question regarding rebate of extra charge the chairman stated that the usual rebate should be taken.

Wedding at Fulford Harbor

(Review Correspondent.)
FULFORD HARBOR, Oct. 24.—On Saturday afternoon a very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Mary's Church, Fulford Harbor, when the Rev. G. T. Aitkens united in marriage Mr. John A. Stewart, of Beaver Point, and Miss Mary A. B. Hall, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Hall, of Hurworth-on-Tees, Durham Co., Eng. The bride entered the church, which was decorated in yellow and white dahlias and chrysanthemums, on the arm of Capt. L. D. B. Drummond, and was followed by her bridesmaid and flower girl, Miss Cree Shaw and Miss Winnie Stewart. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. W. Stewart.

The bride was tastefully gowned in white satin and wore a bridal veil of silk net worked with seed pearls and orange blossoms, and carried a beautiful bouquet of bridal roses with a streamer of lover's-knots and asparagus fern.

The bridesmaid wore a white voile dress and a silk net veil, while the flower girl looked very pretty in white satin. Both the bridesmaid and flower girl carried bouquets of lilies and chrysanthemums.

The bridegroom wore a full evening dress kilt of Stewart tartan.

After the ceremony was concluded Mr. Cecil Abbot played the wedding march while the newly-united couple left the church to be driven away amid a shower of rice and the music of a cowbell.

The wedding party proceeded to the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Shaw, where a reception was held, some twenty-five relatives and friends attending. Capt. Drummond acting as toastmaster. The wedding cake reflected great credit upon its maker, Mrs. Harvey, of Ganges. It was of three square tiers, each superimposed diagonally upon the one beneath it and surmounted by a vase. The cake was decorated with silver leaves and beads, and icing roses.

The groom's gift to the bride was an exquisitely inlaid pendant, while he gave a mother-of-pearl necklace to the bridesmaid and a brooch set with a Persian firestone to the flower girl.

The gift of the bride to the groom was a handsome set of Persian mother-of-pearl cuff links.

At the conclusion of the reception a dance was given in the Fulford Hall by the Fulford Athletic Association in honor of Mr. Stewart, who has been captain of the football team for some time.

The newly-wedded couple led the grand march at 9 o'clock, and after some hours of dancing the gathering adjourned to the dining rooms where refreshments were served.

Mr. James Horel, on behalf of the association, of which he is the president, presented the bride and groom with a set of scraped cut glass cream and sugars. The table decorations were very handsome, being the work of Mr. Percy Horel.

Shortly after supper the happy couple left for their home, "The Nest," Beaver Point.

The dancers remained for some time longer to make use of the excellent music which was supplied by the well known South Saanich five piece orchestra.

The large number of friends of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart wish them a long and happy married life.

Local and Personal Items.
Miss Dina Cosford has been spending a week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leon King.

Mr. Percy Horel made a trip to Victoria last Thursday for theatrical supplies for the forthcoming concert and dance to be given in the Fulford Hall on Oct. 28 by the grass hockey club.

The Grass Hockey Club held its final practice last Saturday.

Mr. M. Gyves is holding a goose shoot at Fulford Harbor next Sunday afternoon, Oct. 30, at 1 o'clock. The shooting will be done with rifles.

Mr. Wm. Cosford is staying at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. Gyves.

CONCERT ON NOV. 8.

The W. A. of St. Andrew's Church are making arrangements to hold a concert in the Auditorium on Tuesday evening, Nov. 8, the concert being given by the Vancouver.

Mrs. Hewitt, Beacon avenue, left for Victoria on Saturday with a friend. Mr. V. Henn and Mr. F. Gold.

Masquerade Ball on Hallowe'en

Arrangements Being Made to Accommodate Large Number; the Elite Orchestra, of Victoria, Will Furnish Music

A large number of people from outside points have signified their intention of attending the big masquerade ball to be held in the Belquist Hall next Monday evening. The excellent music and prizes to be furnished will make the dance one of the most popular ever held in Sidney.

The elite orchestra of Victoria, will furnish music for the dance.

Members of St. Andrew's W. A. have charge of the refreshment department, which assures many good things for the inner man.

As there appears to be some misunderstanding, we have been requested to state that the admission price includes refreshments.

Prizes will be given for the best ladies' costume, best coming ladies' costume, best gentlemen's costume, and best gentlemen's comic costume. The prizes for these are on display in the windows of the Sidney Trading Company, Beacon avenue.

Mr. Henn has made arrangements with Mr. Harrison, of the "Flying Line" whereby a stage will leave the Union Stage Depot, Yates street, Victoria, at 8 o'clock on Monday evening.

Major Ellis returned to the Island on Oct. 17.

Road work will, we understand, be carried on in a different manner next year to what it has been in the past. Under the present system some of the roads are very little better today than they were twenty years ago, in spite of the money that has been granted for their improvement.

Japanese offered $600 per acre for uncleared land on Ganges Harbor, but their offer was very wisely rejected. Several choice spots on Mayne Island and Pender are now owned by Orientals and the adjoining properties have decreased in value on that account. Let us keep Salt Spring Island for the white man.

Mr. E. Streeten will leave the Island shortly, having accepted a position with Major Turner on a stock farm on the mainland.

Mr. G. Walter is having an addition made to his house at Ganges, in which will be installed an electrical plant for the purpose of furnishing his house and outbuildings with electric light. Power will be obtained from a stream which runs thru his property.

Mr. Walter Jameski has returned home after spending nearly two weeks in the Lady Minto Hospital, Ganges. He will not be able to resume his usual occupation for a week or two yet, being still under the doctor's care.

Your correspondent has been informed that there is only one patient in the Lady Minto Hospital at present, which speaks volumes for our climate.

Mr. and Mrs. Butler and son, of New York, are paying a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Hayward, parents of Mrs. Butler.

Mr. and Mrs. Parsell were host and hostess to a few friends on Friday evening. The hours were pleasantly spent with games and music, and refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Thomas, of Victoria, spent Sunday at the home of the former's parents.

Miss Billie Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Atkins, left for Toronto on Friday where she will continue her training in singing. She was accompanied by Miss F. Woodward, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Woodward, who will pay an extended visit to relatives in that place.

Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Butchart left for Seattle on Monday to spend a few days. They will be accompanied on their return by Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Ross, who have been visiting in Toronto for several weeks.

Little Miss Lillian Satterthwaite, of Bamberton, celebrated her eleventh birthday on Friday, Oct. 21, and a large number of her playmates were present, and a merry time was spent in playing games. The birthday cake, with its eleven candles, was surrounded by many other good things dear to the hearts of small folk.

A few of the married ladies of Bamberton were present to assist in entertaining the guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Hindey motored out to Saanich on Sunday.

Mrs. Bertram Maxwell sang at the opening concert of the G. W. V. A. which was held at the Capital Theatre on Sunday evening.

Mr. B. Warriner visited the home of his parents on Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Glover, of Victoria, were the guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. Haggart, on Saturday afternoon.

Masquerade Ball on Monday, Oct. 28, in Belquist Hall. Four good prizes, good music.

News From Mayne Island

(Review Correspondent.)
MAYNE ISLAND, Oct. 25.—Everybody on Mayne Island is talking "silos" these days. Corn fodder has been cut and elevated into the various silos. A few years ago you could not have found one on any of the farms on Mayne, though they had been used in the Old Country for years.

We have our fall chum with us these days—the fog—and the horn has been going day and night, but it is rather wonderful that those of us who live and sleep within a few feet of it, get quite used to the noise and can sleep on undisturbed.

Mr. Peters is on the island, staying at the lighthouse.

Miss Milne, our new school teacher, has taken up her residence on Mayne.

On Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Zala, Mrs. New and son, and Miss Verinder attended service on Mayne Island.

Miss Annie Aitken returned home from East Point very much better. Miss Annie had been quite ill with bronchitis.

Mr. Cain returned from Victoria on Wednesday, Oct. 12.

The C. P. R. steamer Princess Beatrice, calls at Mayne on Mondays, putting us in direct communication with Victoria and Vancouver.

Dr. Kincaid returned from Victoria on Saturday.

Mrs. G. Paddon returned from Saturday on the Island Princess.

A pleasant dance was held in the hall last Friday evening by the Mayne Island Orchestra. Many attended from Galiano and Saturna Islands. Major Ellis, of Ganges, spent the week-end on Mayne Island.

Mrs. Holman came over from Galiano on Monday to catch the steamer Princess Beatrice for Victoria, owing to the island Princess being unable to make a landing at Galiano last Saturday. Passengers had to be landed at Mayne.

MAYNE ISLAND, Oct. 26.—Miss Hodges, who arrived on Mayne Island last Saturday left for Galiano on Thursday to be with the Misses Bellhouse.

Mr. James Bennet made a trip to the Fraser River last Saturday to fetch Mr. Peter Garrick, whose daughter had been taken ill with appendicitis. On Saturday Miss Garrick was taken to Sidney by launch and conveyed to St. Joseph's Hospital, Victoria, an ambulance meeting her at Sidney. Her father accompanied her to the hospital. The same evening a successful operation was performed and we hear Miss Garrick is doing as well as can be expected.

On Thursday, Messrs. Mouat and Corbett and Macdonald left for Vancouver on the Princess Beatrice.

Mr. Peters returned from Ganges last Monday after a pleasant week-end with his son. Mr. Peters is busy overhauling the foghorn at the lighthouse.

Our old friend and neighbor, Mr. Georgeson paid the lighthouse a visit on Thursday, remaining all night.

Mr. Earl Howard made a flying trip to Sidney.

Miss Betty Medd spent last week-end at Point Comfort. Miss Medd is visiting from California, staying with her sister, Mrs. Ridewood.

A Board of Trade meeting was held at Ganges Harbor. Those attending from Mayne being Messrs. Macdonald, Hall, Robson, G. Maude and Capt. Maude.

Commander J. Knight, R.N.R., and Mr. Davis put in to Mayne Island on the tug Restless on their way to Victoria, having spent some months surveying on the north end of Vancouver Island. Commander Knight saw great changes on Mayne Island since he was here last, which was ten years ago. At that time he was a Lieutenant on H. M. S. Leger.

On Monday, Oct. 24, passengers who left on the Princess Beatrice were Miss Little, Mrs. Stanley Page and son, from Galiano.

Dr. Kincaid and Mr. Richard Hall, Mr. J. Culson and Miss Hodges from Mayne, Rev. Mr. Pagne, from Saturna.

On visiting Mrs. Waugh your correspondent was much interested in the turkey industry carried on at her place. There are now twenty-seven turkeys, and next year they intend to raise largely for this stock. The turkeys were purchased from Stewart on Oct. 26.

A bowling tournament will continue on Oct. 26.

Mr. A. P. Allen paid his annual trip to town on Friday.

Mr. Straith of the Experimental Farm, Sidney, came over on Saturday to visit the farm to investigate the cause of the death of some sheep.

Fine Lecture Was Given

Last Thursday evening, Rev. John Antle gave a very interesting lecture on the work of the Columbia Coast Mission, the address being illustrated by lantern slides.

Starting in 1917 with a small launch, Rev. Mr. Antle with the backing of the Anglican Church, began his work among the loggers, healing their minds as well as their bodies, carrying into the camps a touch of home life, leaving fresh magazines supplied by the Women's Auxiliary, and holding church services wherever he went.

The work grew so rapidly that the hospital boat could not begin to supply the needs of the people.

Slides were shown of hospitals built at Alert Bay, Rock Bay and Van Anda, which are all well equipped and well supported by the W. A. of the Anglican Churches.

Slides depicting logging operations as carried on some years ago, and the methods in vogue at present were shown and were both interesting and instructive.

It is to be regretted that only a small number of people attended this lecture as it was well worth while hearing.

Deep Cove Social Club

At a meeting of the Deep Cove Social Club last night it was decided to open the new hall on Friday evening, Nov. 4, with a concert and dance, and a committee consisting of Mrs. Davis, Mr. C. White and Mr. J. Coplin were appointed to make the necessary arrangements regarding the dance, and Messrs. Allan Downey, L. Horth and Frank Smith were appointed a committee to look after the concert portion of the evening's entertainment. Mrs. Rose, Mrs. A. Downey, Mrs. A. Calvert, Mrs. L. Horth, Mrs. F. Smith and Mrs. C. Moses were appointed a committee to look after the refreshment department for the evening.

It has been decided that every Monday evening will be Club Night, Messrs. Lovick and S. Jones being appointed as a committee to look after this matter.

The Club commences its activities with a large membership, and it is expected that many happy evenings will be spent during the coming winter months.

WILL GIVE ADDRESS.

Mr. Y. Copeman, of Victoria, will address a meeting of the United Farmers of B. C. at the Centre Road School tomorrow evening commencing at 8 o'clock. As Mr. Copeman is an able speaker it is hoped there will be a large number present on this occasion.

The organization will shortly resume their monthly socials which proved very successful last winter.

FROM A "SCOT'S" POINT OF VIEW

By "Wee Willie Winkie"

Hello, Mary Ann! That's what everybody will be saying to everybody else in the near future—Hello, Mary Ann! In the meantime everybody will be asking everybody else the question, but "who is Mary Ann" anyway? For the present, at any rate, who Mary Ann really is and her whereabouts must be kept "secret." But the writer can go the length of saying that Mary Ann will be one of the greatest "personalities" who will visit Sidney during the forthcoming Dominion Elections. He will go further and predict that Melghen, Mackenzie King, Crearer and Joe North will have to take a back seat when Mary Ann comes along. Remember this, Mary Ann is a Canadian product, "made in B. C." and home-made at that. When Mary Ann honors Sidney with her presence the Women's Institute, the W. A., or the Sidney Social Club might do worse than entertain her to a "pink tea." Mary Ann has been cheered to the echo from Montreal to Vancouver. She is a female above the average, a Mrs. Pankhurst and "Pussyfoot" Johnston rolled into one. An entirely new type of biped, comely to look upon, the proud owner of a couple of the most bewitching deep blue eyes set in the trickiest little head you ever never did behold, and crowned with a "mat" of the craziest and most illuminating carrotty hair any artist could imagine. Her whole personality is highly magnetic and exudes reinforced animation, a superb bundle of the goodest of good nature. A talker! Why, Jim Critchley—but that's another story. She will pack the Berquist Theatre from roof to ceiling, and when you see her you will, without the slightest effort on your part, yell at the top of your voice "Hello, Mary Ann!"

Talking about Mary Ann leads me to the subject of "What's in a Name." As an illustration of this let me tell you what happened the other day. On Monday last I was travelling from Victoria to Sidney on the "Flying Line." Beside me on the back seat was a lady with a baby boy on her knee. The child did not look well at all; he was fractious, restless and ready to cry if one looked at or spoke to him. I knew what was wrong, but held my tongue—not with my "fingers," you know, just said nothing. After we got on the road a bit I noticed a very agreeable innovation. When we got to Royal Oak Mr. Harrison, the driver, shouted "Royal Oak!" When we came to Keating, Mr. Harrison again obliged with "Keating!" and later on he sang out "Saanichton!" The innovation was quite delightful. Everybody in the car, except myself, "seemed" to know "where they were going." At any rate, just before we came to the end of the new pavement, Mr. Harris turned his head, and, in a semi-Italian operatic tenor voice sang out "Thomas's Cross!" The lady beside me looked startled but was nevertheless able to say "Yes, Mr. Harrison; he's 'cutting his teeth.'" Of course, everybody in the car laughed—except the driver. Say, didn't that car bump over the rest of the trip! Exactly three minutes tell we landed at the "Flying Line" waiting rooms. I timed him with a "stop" watch—I mean a watch that had "stopped." All the same, he's a classy driver. I don't care who says he isn't.

And now I'm going to offer a little bit of advice. Listen: School m'ams should not go mountain climbing in the hunting season. A gentleman who was "shoot-ing" round the tall of Mount Newton on Sunday morning last says he never saw a darned feather. Later on in the day he imagined he saw or heard indications of life towards the top. Being an ardent hunter he climbs right up to the "bald patch" at the top and discovers the reason for the life indications there. The school m'ams hadn't been very hungry after their climb—either that, or too "tired" to pack it back home again—for they left the biggest part of their lunch behind them, and the "birds" were all up there enjoying a gigantic picnic. School m'ams—especially young ones—should be more careful in future, because some hunter might take a notion to "bag" them. I know very well that school m'ams are not "game," but some people will shoot at anything that "moves," and that's just where the school m'am runs the danger, for I never knew a school m'am yet who wasn't an expert mover with the "cane." I know what I'm talking about because I "once" was at school for about an hour and I remember the school m'am with the cane "moved" me so fast that I went out through the window instead of the door, and I've never been back at school since. Yes, that lady could sure handle the Malacca. Talk about Babe Ruth! Why, that dear old school m'am scored a "home run" with the first well—I can feel it yet. But after all, I guess it was coming to me, for I honestly believe I was a real bad boy. I'm not much better yet, but I do "try" to be, and, after all, it isn't just what we accomplish that counts, it's the "effort"—ah, you, the effort counts, too.
So long. See you later.

SOLITUDE.

Last week we published a poem under the above heading, which was written, it is claimed, by Ella Wheeler Wilcox. During the past few days we received the following, which is said to be the original poem written by Mrs. Wilcox.

Laugh and the world laugh with you,
Weep, and you weep alone,
For the world good measure of all your pleasure
But nobody wants your pain
Faint, and your halls are crowded,
Fast, and they'll pass you by
Succeed and give, and they'll let you live
Fail, and they let you die

SMILE AWHILE

"I would like some powder, please," said the young lass to the drug store clerk.
"Yes, miss. Face, gun or bug?"

REMARKABLE ESCAPE.

Mrs.—I see young Brown's life was saved by the bullet hitting a button.
Rather a remarkable escape for a married man, wasn't it?
Mrs.—But why for a married man?
Mr.—Why, just think; the buttons must have been on!

IN WRONG

Gladys, aged four, had been naughty, and her father had had to administer vigorous correction before going to business.
That an impression had been made was apparent when, on his return from business in the evening, Gladys called upstairs with frigid politeness, "Mother, your husband's home."

A GOOD CITIZEN

A recent examination in the public schools brought forth the following answers:
What is an impulse?
An impulse is what the doctor takes hold of to see if you are sick.
Name the vowels.
Vowels aint got no names. They are under the stumick.
What are the duties of a citizen?
The duties of a good citizen is not to spit on the sidewalk and to hold his banana peels till he meets an ash can.
Name the races of mankind.
Bicycle race, horse race, potato race, automobile race, and other kinds.
Who was Nero?
Nero was a Roman Emperor. A song has been written about him called "Nero My God to Thee."

NO SUPERFICIAL SORROW.

She was a rather elderly woman of dusky hue of the kind who looks upon all members of the white race in a friendly, confidential way. And she was arrayed in deepest mourning, from head to foot. Also the look upon her face was entirely in keeping with her melancholy array. It certainly seemed that she was dressed up within the last inch of her mournful feelings. But such, alas! was not the case. For finally she halted before the counter she was seeking—the underwear counter. And this is the conversation that ensued:
"Honey," she addressed the young woman clerk, "is you got any black underwear?"
"No, auntie," replied the salesgirl, "but I have some very nice white ones. Won't they do?"
"No, honey," replied the woman with just a touch of sorrow. "No, they don't do. When I mourns, I mourns clean down to de skin."—El Paso Times.

CHOKED OFF.

"I must tell you frankly, Mr. Meek, that my consent to your marrying my daughter has been wrung from me under protest," said the lady, assuming a belligerent expression.
"I knew that if I did not consent she would disgrace the family by an elopement. When she wants anything, we all have to give it to her, or take the consequences, and long experience has taught me that I might as well try to fan off a cyclone as reason with her when she loses her temper, especially if there is a flat iron or a rolling-pin handy, and so I just give in at once. Has the wedding day been fixed yet, Mr. Meek?"
Mr. Meek—"Um, not yet, and, in fact, madam, I'm a little afraid I can't afford to marry very soon, anyhow. Good good day."

SAM HILL SAYS

(First Press Parlo Farmer)

Our guess is that more people have been spoiled by too much criticism than by too much praise.
Blessings that come in disguise are usually hard to recognize and never very welcome.
We often wish the fellow who "goes on to say" would go on before he says it.
A woman's hair, after it has been washed, is not the only thing she cannot manage. There are the children and her husband.
The honeymoon joins the great army of has-beens when the bride discovers marriage has not killed the groom's appetite.
A man riding on the street car in a strange neighborhood may not know where to get off, but any time a married man cares to know where he gets off all he has to do is to criticize his wife.

Beef higher. Better cattle at Edmonton have increased tops, with $4@4.75 for the exporters; good butchers, $3.50@4; medium, $2.50@3.50; common, $1.50@2.50. Choice cows, $2.75@3.35; good, $2@2.50; medium, $1.50@2; common, $1@1.50, and canners down to 50c. Heavy calves are coming on, and prices weaker at $3.50@4 for tops, and $2@3 for common. Bulls will make $2 if good, and common down to 75c.
Stockers and feeders, steady. Some choice feeders make up to $3.65, but bulk $2.50@3.50; stocker steers, $2@2.75; stocker heifers, $1.50@2.25; stocker cows, $1@2.

HOGS

Hogs lower. Calgary market has been following the breaks down, and receipts light. Thursday's price $10.75; today's $10.25@10.75. Edmonton price has also declined, with Thursday's sales at $9.75; coast market taking any surplus.

SHEEP

Sheep strong. Calgary has handled a large number of sheep at good prices. Lambs, $5.50@7.25; wethers, $4.50@5.25; ewes, $2.25@4.50. Breeding ewes all prices.
Edmonton prices are unchanged, with top lambs quoted $7; wethers, $4.50@5.50; ewes, $3@4; breeding ewes and feeders being shipped to Peace River.

GRAIN

Tremendous rush of wheat on markets and no buying for export has run that grain down very badly, and other grains also suffered, though not severely. No prospect of revival until foreign buying starts again. Trade opinion favors higher prices later.

PRODUCE

Eggs—Calgary prices advanced to $10.50@10.80, light receipts and demand slow. Creamery Butter—Local demand taking most of specials and firsts; no market for seconds; coast not buying much. Prices unchanged. Dairy Butter—Good demand for fancy table; other grades slow at 18c@25c. Cream and Milk—Unchanged. Cheese—Steady at last week's reduction to 21c@24c. Poultry—Lower—Fowl, 11c@14c; chicken, 13c@16c; roosters, 8c@9c; ducks, 15c@20c; geese, 14c@20c; turkeys, 22c@30c; receipts heavy and demand very slow; surplus going into storage. Potatoes—No market outlet and light local demand; last sales at Calgary $17@20; business this week nil.

Eggs—Prices at Edmonton have been advanced, with fresh quoted $9 and stale eggs at value. Poultry—Prices unchanged; chickens, 15c; fowl, 13c; selling market dull and receipts fairly large; quality good. Butter—Not much surplus remaining in northern territory, and some being shipped to U. S.; market steady. Butterfat—Prices unchanged at 34c at creameries, basis specials; mild weather and abundant feed keeping up production.

HAY

Quiet. Upland country points, $13@16; timothy, $20@22; green feed, $11@13. No buying and prospects uncertain.

HIDES

Quiet. Chicago reports some packer hides moving at better prices, but country branded stock not in demand yet.

FURS

Firm. Season's prospects good.

WOOL

Eastern prices 9c@20c on grades; fine wools may keep up, but low grades look weak.

WILL MEAN MUCH FOR MARKET OF B. C.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 26.—A new market is being opened up between Canada and Mexico, and it will affect British Columbia vitally. The Canadian Government is behind the movement. A steamship service is being established between Pacific Canada and Mexican ports, and it will be controlled by the merchant marine. Practically every city of this province will be affected by the imports and exports. The movement has received the attention of Hon. H. H. Stevens, Minister of Trade and Commerce, the Boards of Trade, and the officials at Ottawa. Three officials from the Dominion capital are about to leave for Mexico to confer with President Alvaro Obregon and the Mexican Ministry of Trade, Commerce, Finance and Foreign Affairs.

This will mean a great deal to Vancouver Island as a whole, and Sidney in particular, as well as other centres of British Columbia.

Mexico wishes to import from Canada products such as timber, coal, iron, canned foodstuffs, agricultural machinery, paper and pulp, and other things. In exchange, the southern republic would ship to Canada turpentine, rubber, lumber, (sawwood and dyewood), vanilla, minerals not found in Canada, copra, tobacco, coconuts and other commodities native to the southland.

Ricardo F. Medina, Consul for Mexico at Vancouver, states that his republic is enthusiastically entering into the plan of opening up a great market with Canada. He says:

"Mexico is awakening to a sense of her possibilities and sees a vast market in Canada. This means, for our purpose, British Columbia as the logical seaboard of the Pacific, for, of course, we cannot do much with products for shipping from the Atlantic. My government is glad, indeed, to do her part in expanding reciprocal relations that should mean millions a year to both Canada and Mexico."

This is regarded as one of the most important things of its kind in the history of British Columbia, for it marks the first real entrance of Latin America into serious consideration of Canada, generally, and British Columbia specially.

Already, Mexico has sent a number of skilled mechanics to Mexico from Vancouver, and several are leaving on the next boat.

MAY INSTALL TELEPHONE SYSTEM IN MEXICO.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 26.—Capt. Wellington Cook, veteran of the Boer war, winner of a record in the Great War, and well known in this province, has received an offer from Latin America to install a new telephone system. Opening of commercial relations with Mexico recently, afford another offer. Capt. Cook was superintendent of telephone operations in South America and was engaged in a government contract in Peru when he returned to join the colors.

WAITS FOR LETTER THAT WILL NOT COME.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 26. One of the most pathetic spectacles that comes as a sorrowful aftermath of the Great War, is a little, old, very old man who goes to the post office every day he is able to get there. He is waiting for a letter, but it will never come. Kindly hands lead him home when he is worn with waiting. They tell him gentle little lies that will be winked at by the recording angel. The old man's name is Benjamin Lee Thomas. He is much past 80. His son—the Benjamin of many sons—was Private Benjamin Lee Thomas, Jr. He was killed in 1916, but his aged father, somehow, does not understand. He may understand any day now, for he is due to join Benjamin, Jr., very soon, the doctors say.

"DAD" QUICK, AGED 101, STILL WORKS.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 26. Charles Quick, cheery old busy harness maker, is just 101 years young and celebrated the event this week by working overtime in his little saddler's shop and chatting with scores of people that called with congratulations and presents. The old gentleman is one of the world's wonders of longevity. He would pass for a hale old fellow of 60. He works ten hours a day and earns good money. His work is so good that racehorse experts send thousands of miles for his saddles. He fills orders from London and New York. One of his saddles figured in recent Grand Prix prizes. Mr. Quick hardly furnishes propaganda matter for either anti-tobacco reformers or prohibitionists, as he smokes incessantly and relishes a glass of toddy or quart of beer whenever he feels like it. The old man eats heartily, takes a long walk to stretch himself after his day's work, and spends the rest of the evening chatting with old cronies. He is known far and wide and will be remembered to all his friends in British Columbia. To the Pacific Press Service he sends this message to be transmitted to his friend: "Sorry I can't personally answer all the good wishes you send me on my 101st birthday, but I am much obliged, and thank you. I am feeling pretty good, am old and deaf, and enjoy life as much as ever. Keep your heart happy, like I do, and eat all you can, and sleep, and maybe you'll live to be as old. Mr. Quick's cheery, strong laugh is glad to be heard when he isn't laughing at his own. His lusty, old voice is raised in constant song.

REPORT SAYS JAPANESE DRILL WITH GUNS.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 26. Just as the Canadians have their own volunteer organizations, report says Japanese of British Columbia are drilling with wooden guns, and have regularly organized militia companies. This statement has been filed with leaders of the Asiatic Exclusion League. Similar reports come from Puget Sound cities and California. Interrogation reveals the statement by Japanese leaders that "Japanese like athletics and keep in form with some drills because it is good for health."

HARDWARE IS DIET OF BOY.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 26.—Complaining of stomach ache, Wilbur Thompson, aged 6, son of an electrician, was taken to the hospital where an X-ray showed several articles of hardware inside. These included some buttons, two coins, a tie-clasp, two cuff links and some paper fasteners. Wilbur will recover. Some of the hardware was devoured months ago, the lad admits.

HAS EPIDEMIC OF LIBEL SUITS LATELY.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 26.—The Vancouver Sun, a morning paper, is a familiar defendant in court these days. After passing through several suits, including the famous Campbell-Cromie case settled last week, the paper is now defendant for a damage suit instituted by a woman whose case was reviewed in a two-column article, but who was acquitted. She sues for an unstated amount.

CONDITIONS IN B. C. LOOK ENCOURAGING.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 26.—A cheerful, analytical review of conditions in British Columbia appears this week in The Vancouver Province. Taking a digest of the interior press, The Province quotes from the country papers, and comments on conditions in a manner that dispels gloom and echoes the optimistic spirit of the rural editors. The review speaks of the helpfulness and community worth of the out-of-town publications, and the part they are playing in provincial progress.

JAPANESE SYNDICATE BUYS LAND.

NEW WESTMINSTER, Oct. 26.—A Japanese syndicate, headed by Tako Saito and composed of eight stated associates, have closed a deal for the purchase of 200 acres of land in the Fraser Valley, says a report filed with the Asiatic Exclusion League. It is said that Saito came to British Columbia as a laborer four years ago, and has amassed some wealth since.

ROMANCES OF FAMOUS HYMNS.

Some of the most beautiful and popular of our hymns were the offspring of sadness and tragedy.

Charlotte Elliott wrote "Just As I Am" when she was ill and discouraged. The Rev. Henry Francis Lyte wrote "Abide With Me" when the "darkness of death" was creeping over him.

Cowper tried to commit suicide twice and failed, after which he wrote "God Moves in a Mysterious Way."

Apart from the great beauty of "Our Blest Redeemer Ere He Breathed His Tender Last Farewell," the hymn is remarkable from the fact that the authoress, Harriet Auber, first wrote it on a pane of glass in a window of her house at Hoddesdon.

"Christians, Awake, Salute the Happy Morn" has been a favorite Christmas hymn for more than 150 years. John Byron, the author, wrote it for his favorite little daughter, Dolly, who found it one Christmas morning awaiting her with other presents.

"There is a Happy Land" was written by Andrew Young in 1838. He happened, during that year, to be spending his holiday in Rothsay, and one day passed the afternoon in the house of a friend. A little girl began to play a pretty little Indian melody on the piano, and Mr. Young, who was passionately fond of music, begged her to play it again, remarking that it would make a capital tune for a children's hymn. That night the tune still haunted him, and early in the morning he rose and, while walking in the garden, wrote the hymn.

Perhaps the most quickly written hymn was "From Greenland's Icy Mountains," composed by Bishop Herbert in little more than fifteen minutes.

THE REVIEW

WITH THE COWBOYS IN TEXAS

then dropped from my fingers and I turned very pale, so they told me. My companion on shift, Mr. Collins, wanted to know if some of my relations were dead. It is sufficient to say that the object of my heart was married to an old school mate of mine. The letter went on to state that she had given her love to another and that she never thought for a moment that I loved her, only as a friend, etc. She furthermore went on advising me to grin and bear it, as there were as good fish still in the sea as had ever been caught. I wanted someone to kill me.

After I knew that the object of my heart could never be mine, I became unsettled. I felt that I could no longer remain contented where I was, so quitting my job, I decided to go to the "Black Hills," as everyone was talking there in those days. Mr. Collins decided to go with me. So we both struck out for the town of Wichita to get our wages from Mr. Cooper. Mr. Collins had one good horse of his own, and so had I. Mine was a California pony that I had given $50 for some time before. At the time I purchased my pony my intention was to make a rancher out of him, he was only about three years old and according to my judgment he would make a "bigotting striker" on the racetrack.

After getting our wages from Mr. Cooper and the other cow-punchers, we proceeded to take in the town, with the never-failing result that after two or three days of carousing around we left Wichita "busted," with the exception of a few dollars. As we now hadn't enough money to take us to the Black Hills, we concluded to pull our freight for Medicine River, 100 miles west. We arrived in a little town on the Medicine River called Kiowa at sundown one evening, accompanied by a very cold wind. We stayed that night at the Davis House, which was kept by a man named Davis. Collins wanted to make arrangements with Davis that night to board us on "tick" until we could get work. But I would not agree to that arrangement.

The next morning, after paying for my night's lodging, I had just one dollar in my pocket, and I gave that to Collins and bade him adieu. I then headed southeast across the hills, not having any particular destination in view. With the pain of disappointment over my little Texas girl gnawing at my heart, I wanted to go somewhere, but didn't care where. That night I lay out in the bush by myself and the next morning changed my course to southeast down a creek called "Driftwood." About noon I landed in Gustave Jenkins' cow camp on Driftwood, where the "Little Mule" creek branches off from it. I remained there all night, and next morning when I was betting ready to leave, Mr. Hutcheson asked me if I would stay and work in his place while he went to Kansas and back. I agreed to do so finally on condition that my pony was turned in all the corn he could eat over and above my wages, which were to be $30 a month.

BRITISH COLUMBIA

By David Warwick.

So it was that Vancouver Island became British. The mainland was nominally Spanish, but the Napoleonic wars and the movement for freedom in the American colonies kept Spain fully occupied and prevented any worth while attempt to colonize the continental tract. In due course, the republic of Mexico replaced Spanish authority to the south. The republic was not interested beyond California. The way was open for complete British occupation, especially since Canada had been ceded to the British crown. And it was not long before that occupation became a fact.

With the beginning of the nineteenth century the adventurous, if monopolistic arm of the Northwest Fur Trading Company, and of the Hudson's Bay Company reached across the Rocky Mountains and seized upon the rich fur areas of the coast. Sir Alexander Mackenzie, an employee of the former concern (which was later absorbed by its greater rival) was the first of the fur-trading explorers to make his way to the ocean by the overland route through British territory. Mackenzie came out where Bella Coola now stands. The Canadian company established itself firmly in coastal territory without too strict a regard for boundaries. It was not long, however, until the Americans, with the pioneer Astor in the van, were at the coast with the idea of setting up a trading monopoly similar to that enjoyed in British areas by the competing company. Astor's headquarters was named after himself—Astoria. When war broke out between the United States and Britain, the Canadian company seized Astoria and held it until after peace was made in 1818. David Thompson's great journey down the Columbia river was based upon an attempt to forestall Astor, and it is said, that, had not a mutiny occurred, Britain would have had a strong claim upon a much larger share of the Pacific coast country than we as Canadians have today. The Hudson's Bay Company set up its headquarters at Fort Vancouver on the Columbia River in 1825. But the Americans were aggressive, and by 1843 their activities had become so pronounced that the company shifted its base to Fort Victoria, on the Island of Vancouver.

The Hudson's Bay Company, at that time, held the entire island under charter from the crown for colonizing purposes. It has been said that Gladstone took issue with the British government of that day concerning the making of this grant to the great fur-trading concern, but was silenced with the reply that the land was thereby held to England in that settlement by alien squatters was rendered impossible. Be that as it may, there was little evidence of real colonizing activity, and it was said that the company had not any real intention of becoming active in that direction and so making the finding of game more difficult to their hunters, for by that time the sea-otter had been exterminated and the animals of the forests were the source of their prosperity. Victoria prospered and soon was the dominant centre of trade in the North Pacific. The Americans pressed for the control of the coastal areas right to Alaska, and the "fifty-four or fight" slogan was born. England sent a fleet around to keep a watchful eye upon the further development of that idea. But there grew in England at that time, an idea that the country was merely a sea of mountains and in due course the boundary line was settled at the 49th degree as it stands today. History records that the Hudson's Bay Company left some twelve of its posts in American territory as a result of that settlement and withdrew within a newly-defined British area.

Just as the star of Spain diminished as the British constellation grew in brilliance, so did any dreams the directors of the Company may have entertained as to the future of the coast country fade with the rise to prominence of the gold seeker in the affairs of the British coastal region. The hunters of the precious metal, almost in a day—so great was the force of the rush of the prospectors—swept away the nearly regal sovereignty of the traders in furs. New Caledonia, as the mainland country was called, was erected into a crown colony, and later, union was arranged with the crown colony of Vancouver Island. The rights of the Hudson's Bay Company were purchased, confederation with the Canadian provinces in the east brought about, which was followed in due course, by the construction of the first overland railway from the far east in the Dominion. The three great factors in the early development of the coast country—the search for Northwest passage, the fur trade and the gold rush—had run their course and were closed chapters. British Columbia had been born. The great resources of a vast area in fisheries, forests, mines and fertile valleys were to be administered by men elected by the people for the purpose. But historians will never forget the part the old fur trading companies played in the retention of New Caledonia and of Vancouver Island to British rule.

The union with the other Canadian provinces took place in 1871, and, in that year, the census could credit the Canadian lands to the west of the Rockies with but 36,247 people. Ten years later there was quite an addition to the rolls, the total being 49,459. Between 1881 and 1891 the first railway through from the east was constructed to the coast, and the usual result occurred. The census men in the latter year found that the population at and about the coast had just about doubled and gave the province credit for 98,173 people. Almost a similar record was made during the ten year, that followed for the total at the census of 1901, based on an expansion of the population to the figure of 138,600. By 1911 the census of the province were more than double the number of 1901, for there were 292,480 persons claim- ing citizenship in British Columbia. The figures mean that since 1881 there has been a practical doubling of the population in the province each decade until 1911. The figures of the 1921 census enumerators have not been given to the public, but it is safe to assume the increase will be substantial, for the second period in this century has been by no means the least in point of expansion at the Canadian western coast.

It is a pleasant task, also, to be able to chronicle the great extent of the expansion in production in British Columbia. Its forests are easily greatest in Canada and among the largest in the world, and the lumbering industry has been systematically organized to cut, mill and market the valued product, for the splendid quality of the coast woods has created a demand in many countries. The mineral resources are large, and are varied, and while much wealth has been won from these sources, the prospectors have scarcely scratched the tremendous areas which are likely to yield deposits rich in value to the miners in the future. The agricultural industry has shown a rapid and satisfactory growth. The fisheries of the northern Pacific waters are among the greatest in the world. The resources in water power are all that might be expected in a vast region dominated by mighty mountains are British Columbia is. It will be interesting to treat these resources a little more in detail.

Mining is easily the most romantic of the productive activities in the province. This may be because of the tremendous impetus it gained there at the time of the gold rush, when the mainland was known as New Caledonia and was the sacred preserve of the fur-traders. Be that as it may, British Columbia is probably, per capita, the richest mineral division in the Dominion, which is saying a great deal for Canada is among the favored nations where economical minerals are concerned. The provincial figures show that from 1852 to 1918 the total value of the mineral production of British Columbia was $637,353,581, distributed as follows: Placer gold, $75,436,103; lode gold, $97,121,786; silver, $46,839,621; lead, $42,294,251; copper, $145,741,069; zinc, $13,278,058; coal and coke, $187,147,652; building stone, bricks and so on, $28,843,272; miscellaneous minerals, $651,759. Mining is speculative and so, romantic and interesting.

One can always see the forests, and seeing, accept the act of their existence as a commonplace. Not so in British Columbia. There the timber-lands, even according to the most conservative estimates by experts, contain close to 250 billion feet of merchantable wood. This is about one-quarter of the total timber resources of Canada. In pioneering days in Ontario, the land was the important thing, and the timber that graced it almost a nuisance. The obstructing trees were cleared off that the land might be suitably cropped. An occasional wood lot is all that remains of a one-time great forest. That in the older settled portion of the province. In the central and northern sections of Ontario, a great deal of timber remained, and, because the market was good, this had, up to a few years ago, sufficed to maintain Ontario, from a production and value standpoint, as the chief lumbering province in the Dominion. The figures issued by the Federal authorities on lumbering for 1918—the most recent—show that the values of production in lumber, shingles and lath, in the coast province, now exceed those in Ontario. The pulp and paper industry still enables the old province by the great lakes to maintain the lead. But the pulp and paper industry at the coast is growing and it can be but a matter of a few years until the figures of revenues from timber in British Columbia will be far and away above those from any other Canadian province. The population of the province is not great, and the local demand small in accordance. This condition is, indeed, accentuated by the abundance of wood suitable for building and the ease with which houses of log construction are built by the settlers. British Columbia, has had to look to the prairies, and to foreign countries to absorb the surplus production from her forests. Gratifying progress has been made in these markets. The construction of the two lines of Canadian National Railways through the Yellowhead Pass to the Pacific coast has afforded readier access to the expanding portion of the Canadian prairie west. And now the ships of the fleet of the Canadian Government Merchant Marine are a big factor in the marketing of the products abroad. In no other part of Canada can such great trees be seen. We have some beautiful, symmetrical old elms in the Ottawa valley and in other sections of the eastern portion of the Dominion. We have, also, splendid examples of the maple and the oak. But nowhere else in this country can we find the Douglas fir (named after David Douglas, explorer, 1825-30) reaching a height of 300 feet and attaining a circumference at the base of between 30 and 50 feet. Not all of them, of course, grow to that great size, and, as a matter of fact, lumbermen prefer the trees of about 150 feet in height and from 5 to 6 feet in diameter, but the variety is to be found all the way along the coast from the international boundary to the Skeena river and inland to the eastern foothills of the Rocky Mountains. In addition to the Douglas fir are the hemlock, black spruce, balsam, yellow "cedar" and white pine of the British Columbian forests.

AFRAID TO VISIT UNITED STATES.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

BLACK AND WHITE PREDOMINATE.

"The latest from Paris" never fails to arouse feminine interest. And no wonder. The innate art and taste of the Parisian woman, be she countess or shopgirl, is something to marvel at. She not only knows exactly what to wear, but what not to wear.

In many cases, to live is a struggle in war-ridden France. The Paris models one hears so much about are only for the women of great wealth and the women with the favorable rate of exchange. But the French woman is proverbially clever with her fingers and happy when she is using them.

The garment must be chic, yet serviceable, so she chooses black. The quality is not of the first importance; it must be simple and well-cut. A becoming black felt sailor shape she can buy very reasonably. Two quills placed so give it the desired degree of smartness. Black shoes and stockings—not necessarily of silk—complete the costume, and, tripping daintily along in the "Bois" she presents an appearance that would rival madam, who never shops out of the Rue de la Paix.

"The latest from Paris," in a word, is black. The absence of color in feminine apparel during the summer has been the surprise, and at the same time admiration, of American and Canadian visitors. London, it might be mentioned, has been in the throes of a very bad epidemic of figured chintz. It is somewhat of a shock to find that the perambulating laundry bags one sees in Hyde Park are considered quite ravishing.

For morning street wear in the French capital, first place is awarded the black tailleur. With it, a smart white vest, buttoning high, or with turnback collar. In the late afternoon one is struck with the soft black gowns, scant of sleeves, with simple round or square-cut necks. Later appears the shiny black restaurant gown, sleeveless, high in the back, with the same distinction of cut.

Whatever she dons, the Parisienne is never guilty of the weird color schemes that unfortunately one often sees on the streets of Canadian cities.—Gay Henders, in Manitoba Free Press.

I WAS HIS IDEAL.

Letters from enamoured admirers are one of the penalties which an actress has to suffer; and I have had a fair share," says Shirley Kellogg. "None I have received however has caused me so much embarrassment as that sent by a man who wrote:

"Dear Madam.—I have attained the age of forty-nine without coming into contact with my ideal. When I saw you at the Hippodrome on Wednesday evening I realized that you were she. I may say with truth that never in my life have I witnessed so enrancing a performance by so beautiful a lady. I am of independent means and should afford to give you everything you desire. I should like you to leave the stage if possible, but if you would rather not, I should put no barrier in your way. Stamped addressed envelope enclosed for the favor of your reply."

And yet they say gallantry today is dead.

LONDON'S OLDEST WOMAN

In Albany Road, Camberwell, lives Mrs. Elizabeth Hutton, who is said to be the oldest woman in London.

But only in years is she old. Her eyes are bright, her voice is merry. She can sing a song almost as well as ever she did, and her memory is a thing to wonder at.

"I've not quite reached the century," she said, "but I'm getting on for ninety-eight, and there's no telling how long I may live."

Mrs. Hutton doesn't believe in over-eating or over-drinking. Moderate has always been her rule, and it has certainly answered.

Her advice about eating is that one should only take plain, wholesome food. She likes a few potatoes with her breakfast bacon, and enjoys a piece of steak for her dinner.

A cup of cocoa and gruel are her other standbys.

Not until she was seventy-five did she take to wearing spectacles, and at eighty she could still thread a needle. But she doesn't pretend to read or sew now days.

"If folk didn't quarrel, and made up their minds to be happy, they'd live a long time," is her belief. "Real happiness," she said, "comes from helping others." Her only worry is her rheumatism.

For forty years Mrs. Hutton has lived in the same street in Camberwell, and she has been a widow since she was forty-two. Her memory goes back a long way. She can recall Queen Victoria's coronation, stage coaches, and the first railways. She doesn't consider the fashions of today nearly so pretty as those of the past. Especially does she condemn the short frocks girls wear now days.

But there, she explained, "we have been mixing with the French and I suppose they do show their legs."

KEEPING HER CHEERFUL

Do you think I can make her happy?

Well, she has always "have something to laugh at," London Opinion.

It is better that a frock should be left in cold water for ten days and be changed before drying. Afterward, wash with a clean cloth and lay in the sun all day.

SUCH IS LOVE.

It was glorious spring, but it was dusty, and the rude wind blew grit into their faces as the youth and the maid turned the corner.

"Sweetums," he cooed gently, drawing her close to his manly heart, "did you get any in your eyes?"

"Yes, my jewel," she simpered, mopping her eyes with a handkerchief which she had extracted from some hiding place in her attire.

"Ah! in which of your glorious orbs reflecting the light of heaven did that beastly piece of dust intrude?" he questioned fiercely.

"My right," she said, and added, "Sweetheart, did you get any in your eyes?"

"Yes, my dove," he responded, while he mopped away at his eye with the same handkerchief which she had used.

"How sweet!" she exclaimed, "and yours was the right eye, too?"

"Yes, light of my life!"

"Adolphus," she whispered rapturously, "do you think I could have been part of the same grain of dust?"

"I hope so!" he answered fervently.

"Wouldn't it be lovely, honey?" she whispered.

"Glorious!" he breathed.

And the wind moaned in agony, and the cats and dogs howled, and the signboard at the corner of Marine Drive and Third street turned completely around.

TRIED RECIPES

CORN CHOWDER—Cut two slices of salt pork, fry out, remove the pork and in the fat cook half a diced onion until tender, but not browned. Add four cupfuls of sliced potatoes, two cupfuls of water, one teaspoonful of salt and a quarter of a teaspoonful of paprika. Five minutes before the potatoes are done add two cupfuls of scraped corn pulp and four cupfuls of milk. Simmer for five or six minutes longer and thicken with a little flour mixed with cold water. Stir constantly until the chowder thickens and stir in six broken soda crackers.

SALADS OF EGGS—One good one is made of hard boiled eggs. Remember to cook the eggs just below the boiling point for half an hour to have them digestible—cut in half and lay on slices of tomato or lettuce leaves. Around each slice of tomato and half of egg lay a ring of sweet green pepper, made simply by washing and slicing the pepper.

Another good egg salad is made of halves of egg whites from which the yolks have been removed, filled with diced beets and peas, and mixed with mayonnaise. Each egg half is proper up in lettuce leaves and the egg yolks are crumbled over the whole salad. More mayonnaise is passed.

ITALIAN LAMB STEW—A very nice lamb stew is made by stewing two pounds of lamb cut in three-inch pieces with plenty of water, half a cup of vinegar and one chopped onion and a seasoning of salt and pepper. When lamb is tender stir in two tablespoons of flour, two cups of tomatoes, one tablespoon of chopped parsley and one finely chopped green pepper. Let boil up once and serve in a dish bordered with cooked rice.

DELICIOUS BREAKFAST DISH—Mix one cup of finely chopped ham with one cup of chopped cooked tongue, a teaspoon of chopped parsley and half a cup of bread crumbs; moisten this with a little sweet milk and season with salt and paprika. Cover well buttered shirred egg dishes with this mixture and break two eggs over each dish. Place in a moderate oven and bake until whites are set.

FRUIT SLICES FOR AFTERNOON TEA—Beat until light four eggs and one and a half cups of sugar. Sift one cup of flour with one and a half teaspoons of baking powder and add to the first mixture with one teaspoon each of ground nutmeg, cloves, allspice, two teaspoons of ground cinnamon, half a cup of sliced blanched almonds and half a cup of chopped seeded raisins. Mix well and spread on flat baking pans. Bake in a medium oven and when cold cut in slices three inches long and one and a half inches wide.

WORTH REMEMBERING

A raw lemon works wonders when brass work is very dirty. Rub the stained parts and wipe off almost at once with a clean flannel.

A simple cure for catarrh is to occasionally sniff up the nose some salt water—a teaspoonful of salt to half a pint of warm water.

When polishing furniture wring out a cloth in hot water and wipe over the polished surface before applying the cream. The result will be a high polish that will not finger mark.

Fruit stains may be removed from table linens by moistening them with camphor. If treated in this manner before they are placed in water the stains will disappear as if the linen had been washed.

If new patent leather shoes are rubbed all over with a little vasoline put in with a piece of soft flannel and kept hot they will never crack. Patent leather should be kept in a warm, dry place and should not be worn more than three or four days.

JOB PRINTING

We are in a position to handle job work in a satisfactory manner, and will appreciate any orders received. The Review plant is well equipped in every way, being the largest and most up-to-date of any found in a town the size of Sidney. We have added considerable equipment to the commercial job printing line. The Review has had splendid support in this direction, and this fact is very much appreciated. If at any time our customers are not satisfied we hope they will tell us so, and we will endeavor to make it right. We go on the principal that only the very best work is wanted by our many customers, and we endeavor to give them what they want. To those who have printing to be done, we ask them to give us a chance to do it. We feel sure that our prices will be found reasonable, consistent with good workmanship.

OUR AIM

In all kinds of work, good results require good implements kept in good condition. If the right sort of implement is important to an individual workman, efficient tools for industry and commerce are a necessity.

Telephone service is one of the tools of industry and commerce in most common use and upon which much depends. To transmit the vibrations of the human voice from any point to any other point demands an expensive mechanism of the highest order of scientific precision and an efficient organization.

It is our aim to have the telephone with the cooperation of the public, the most dependable tool of industry.

GERMANY OF TODAY

By Miriam Teichner in St. Paul Pioneer Press

If the sales force of a German department store would only stop insisting on a two-and-a-quarter hour lunch period, there would be less shoplifting.

The sales force, however, has the remotest intention of changing its quaint custom of parting its working day in the middle by this protracted period for rest and refreshment. Hence, from 1:30 a.m., when the lunch period of the first shift begins, until 4 p.m., when the lunch hour of the second shift ends, the sales force is only at half strength. And in that time the shoplifters make merry.

This is only one of the problems of a Berlin department store manager which has been accentuated since the war. It is the shoplifters who have accentuated it, because the sales force has done nothing new; it always did have a long lunch hour, and it is to be assumed always will have a long lunch hour.

But with the general increase in after-the-war moral turpitude, the gentle art of eloping with unpaid-for goods has increased to an extent which, to say the least, is disturbing to the profit and less expert of any well organized store. And during the four-and-a-half hour period in which one or the other half of the store personnel is dining, even an augmented force of store detectives cannot cope with the ingenuity of the shoplifter who really loves his work.

Berthold Israel, partner and executive head of Israel's one of the oldest and best known stores in Berlin, says the Berlin police force is utterly unable to cope with the shoplifting evil. He says that there are so many shoplifters that the city has no longer place for them in its jails. Hence, when they are caught playing their trade, instead of being held for trial they are liberated after complaint has been made against them; during the interim, between complaint and trial, if they are real artists they continue their practice.

They have, says Mr. Israel, a number of ingenious devices with which they work. One is in the form of a pasteboard dry goods box, apparently snugly tied about with stout cord. The cord, however, is merely affixed to the lid of the box in such a manner as to make it look as though it were tied completely about. As a matter of fact, it extends only over the top and sides of the cover. One end of this cover also is neatly hinged to work up and down. The box is placed on the counter and when the salesman is for a moment diverted, a piece of silk of considerable value or other desired goods can be slipped into the apparently well tied box with a minimum of trouble.

Thousands of marks worth of stolen goods have been carried from stores in these boxes and taken to shoplifter's rendezvous which abound throughout the city, and in which illicit trade goes on day and night.

That is Difficulty No. 1 in the running of an up-to-date department store in Berlin. Difficulty No. 2, perhaps, is the gentleman officially known as the commissioner of demobilization. It is the business of this personage to attend to the various economic and social complexities which have arisen and are continually arising in the process of bringing a long warring country back to something approaching peace. He would appear at first blush to have little or nothing to do with the running of a big store, but he is ubiquitous, this official, and makes everything his business. In the first place, he refuses to permit folk who live in one city to take employment in another, because the overcrowding of dwellings makes it desirable that the population of the big cities remain, as near as possible, constant.

Hence, organizations which were accustomed to draw for their employees on a whole country are restricted to one city. And while unemployment is rife, Mr. Israel says that it is, to a large extent, the undesirables who are unemployed. Competent salespeople and department heads and executives are hard to find.

Even when they are found and employed, they may not be permitted by the demobilization commissioner to continue their work. This commissioner has as one of his tasks the putting of woman back into her pre-war place. It is something like trying to put a jumping jack with a strong spring back under a box lid with a weak catch, but the demobilization commissioner has statistics as his aid, and statistics, as every German knows, are invaluable. Every woman whose husband is making, in the opinion of the commissioner, enough money to support the family, must stop working. She has nothing to say about it, it is her employer who is talked to, gently but firmly, by a member of the commission, and the woman is discharged, no matter how competent and desirable she may be as an employee. Contrariwise, it happened in the Israel store the other day that the commissioner demanded the discharge of a skilled salesman in the silk department, because his wife, as owner of a small specialty shop, was earning enough money to support the family in the style to which, according to the demobilization official, it ought to be accustomed. There is no appeal from the decision. The man is valuable, but he must go. Whether he will become a mere appendage in the shop of his wife or will himself take over the business, Mr. Israel does not presume to say.

The general shifting of international boundaries is another little thing which has added to the complexity mer customers in Schleswig-Holstein are turning their trade to Denmark, and the one-time buyers in Alsace Lorraine are doing their mail order purchasing in France. Also, pauper for catalogue costs just twenty times as much as it did before the war; a catalogue which once could be mailed for three pfennig postage now costs fifteen, and one which formerly cost five pfennig postage now costs thirty. Moreover, a page of advertising in the Berlin Tageblatt, which once could be had for 700 marks now costs 12,000.

Despite these disturbing facts, however, the department store manager of today's Germany is a cheerful soul, and seems not to have a dire prognostication in his system. He says Germans are buying better materials today than they have ever bought before, that the entire standard of buying has been shifted to a much higher level. One reason for this, he says, is the very cost of the goods which should, apparently, operate in the opposite direction. "Things cost so much," says Mr. Israel, "that when people buy they want to buy something that will last. The cheap materials naturally do not wear as well as the better ones. Therefore, it is the better things that are being bought, to the almost total exclusion of the cheaper class of goods. Moreover, the German woman, to a much greater extent than the American, buys materials by the yard, rather than ready-made clothing, and has them made up at home by a seamstress."

Another reason for a boom in department store buying, says Mr. Israel, is that the German population at the end of the war was thoroughly "zerlumpt" or ragged. That they had been able to hold out as long as they did, making a minimum of purchases, was due largely to the custom of the German matron in providing her daughter with a stupendous trousseau. The before-the-war bride went to her husband properly equipped, only if there went with her a supply of personal and household linen sufficient to last the remainder of her life. It was not considered exactly nice to have to buy such things after marriage—no matter how enduring the marriage might turn out to be.

They have plenty of time in which to do their shopping. The big city department store opens at 8:45 a.m. and closes at 7 p.m. Neither the Saturday afternoon half holiday, as almost universally practiced in England and America, nor the Monday morning closing which is the adaptation of the week-end half holiday idea, has, as yet, made inroad into Germany. Each employee is entitled to one holiday a month, but the store remains open six full days. Before the war, department stores were open till 8 p.m. every day. Modern ideas are, however, playing havoc with the former meek peace of mind of the German employee. He—and she—intent as never before on an outdoor life which includes a strenuous programme of tennis, rowing, swimming, paddling and tramping, complain that a 7 o'clock closing leaves, after the long ride home, too little time for evening enjoyments. The association of department store managers respond, however, that as long as a two-and-a-quarter hour lunch period is enjoyed the late closing is hardly to be avoided. And the two-and-a-quarter hour lunch period, in which all of Berlin goes to its home or its boarding house for dinner, is an institution. So, as Mr. Israel says with a shrug that would be French if it were not so typically after-the-war German, "What are you going to do about it?"

The 25th Annual Exhibition at Ganges

SECOND PRIZE WRITE-UP.

Written by Cecil C. Elton, of Ganges.
B. C., aged 15 years.

The twenty-fifth annual exhibition of the Gulf Islands, held at Ganges Harbour on Sept. 14, was a great success in many ways.

The flowers, fruit, vegetables, cookery and fancy work to be exhibited arriving the night before, gave plenty of time for them to be arranged to the best advantage. The tables decorated with flowers were arranged down both sides of a long stand, which held the sewing, fancy work, collections of flowers and fruit exhibits. These tables added to the appearance of the hall.

The apples, vegetables, cookery, bottled fruit, jams and jellies were placed on stands around the walls.

The exhibits were not so many as usual, but on the whole the quality was considered better.

The judging inside the hall was done the night before, a great improvement as it allowed the hall to be opened quite early in the morning.

The majority of the poultry for the exhibition arrived the night before. The exhibits in this class were not a great number, but what there were, were good. The fancy chickens were of great interest. There were Leghorns, Wyandottes, Buff Orpingtons, d'Uches, pucks, geese, turkeys, Barred Rocks and some fancy birds were exhibited.

The cows, horses and pigs arrived the morning of the exhibition. There were not so many grade cows shown, more of them were pure-bred.

One very fine Jersey bull was brought in for exhibition, not to compete for a prize. Most of the cows were Jerseys, a few Holsteins and other kinds.

Quite a crowd gathered to hear the judges' remarks on the cows. Only a few horses were shown this year.

A very fine sow and litter of small pigs were shown, besides other pigs of different types and sizes.

The C. P. R. boat made a special trip so that it was possible for the G. W. V. A. band, many excursionists from Victoria and other Gulf Islands to enjoy a long day at Ganges.

The Guild of Sunshine provided a good lunch and tea, out of which they made quite a large sum of money. Also there were ice creams and sweets to be got.

The show ended by a match between the Ganges and Gabriola football teams, and ended by Ganges winning by three to none, which was keenly enjoyed by many people.

It is hoped that the twenty-sixth annual exhibition will be as successful as the one of this year was.

CECIL C. ELTON.

FARMER-LABOR CANDIDATE

SIDNEY, B. C., Oct. 27 (By Unassociated Press).—The latest development in the election here indicates that Sloan, the Farmer-Labor candidate has "secured" all the other candidates away from this district. Sloan informs us that he has a bigger "score" waiting for them if they do come "poaching" on his Political Ranch. Latest information from the "Sloan Camp" says that while Melghen and King are busy telling the electors how much they really "love and respect" each other, Sloan is selling

Mr. Edward Hayes and Mr. Henry Fink, of Victoria, are guests at the Sidney Hotel.

Miss Agnes Williams, of Cumberland, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. H. Way, Marine Drive.

Mr. T. H. Simpson, of Portland Island, was a visitor to Sidney yesterday on business.

Miss W. Speechley, of Victoria, spent the week-end at the guest of Mrs. Horth, Deep Cove.

Mr. G. Clark, of Patricia Bay, visited Sidney last Tuesday, returning in the evening.

Mr. F. McRay, of Vancouver, who was a recent visitor to Sidney, returned home yesterday.

Those wishing to rent costumes for the masquerade ball on Monday night will find costumes at Sidney Trading Co.

The librarian reports that the books have been sent into Victoria and the new shipment should reach here by the end of the week.

Messrs. Sid and Peter Roberts, who returned last week from the Cariboo district, are visiting at their brother's, Mr. Samuel Roberts.

Mr. Nichollet arrived home from St. Joseph's hospital last Thursday afternoon, having almost completely recovered from his recent illness.

On account of many other attractions last night, the dance and card party to be held by St. Andrew's W. A. was postponed for an indefinite period.

Misses Patty and Grace Simister, who were spending the week-end at their home here, left on Monday for Vancouver, where they will visit friends for a few days.

Mr. D. Craig, our local blacksmith, had the misfortune to be kicked on the arm while shoeing a horse recently. No bones were broken, but he was unable to attend to his usual duties for a few days.

Mr. Thos. Booth, of Nanaimo, Liberal candidate for this constituency, visited Sidney and district today, meeting friends and supporters. In the evening he will meet the executive of the Sidney and North Saanich Liberal Association in the Veterans club room.

A meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Veterans of France will hold a meeting on Thursday, Nov. 3, in the clubroom of the Veterans of France, commencing at 3 p.m. All members are requested to be present as there is important business to be transacted.

Mr. J. Gilman, Sidney's musical artist, visited James Island yesterday. Mr. Gilman makes the trip to the island every other Wednesday, so his bright smile will be seen at his shop here for two more weeks in rapid succession.

The members of St. Andrew's W. A. having undertaken to provide refreshments for the dance to be held on Monday evening, Oct. 31, all members are requested to bring send cakes, etc. for the occasion. Further information may be had from the entertainment committee or phone 24.

WILL MEET ON FRIDAY

St. Andrew's Church committee will meet in the church on Friday evening at 8 o'clock. There are several important matters to come before the members and it is hoped that all will make a special effort to be present.

THE AUDITORIUM

Sonia Varinoff, young, beautiful, and money-loving, comes to America to join her father, Dimitri Varinoff, a wealthy Schuyler Van Vechtan, who lives in the tower of one of New York's sky-scrapers. Which his business success has built, attempt to satisfy her with money to Lady Joane Tremelyn, daughter of an English countess, has been brought to the United States for the purpose of making a rich marriage. The favored suitor is Jimmie Sutherland, a westerner, with too much money and too little breeding. Peter Derwynt, Van Vechtan's secretary, is in love with Lady Joane and his employer agrees to help them.

When Sonia makes her appearance, Schuyler gives her over to Peter to look after. The girl becomes attached to Peter and very jealous of Joane. Dimitri, her father, is accidentally killed by a car. This tragedy seems to draw the pretty orphan still closer to the secretary and in a scene that is deliberately framed by Sonia to win Peter's love, Joane becomes convinced that he no longer cares for her and breaks off their engagement. Shortly afterward she marries Jimmie Sutherland. The union is very unhappy.

Peter, still in love with Joane, works harder than ever to forget. But the devotion of Sonia for him is so innocent and passionate that he gives in and marries her. To bring Joane and Peter together as friends, Schuyler gives a dinner party, at which Sonia and Jimmie Sutherland start a flirtation. They frequently attend parties together after that. Pressed for funds on account of her extravagance, Sonia is offered by Jimmie an opportunity to appear as "The Masked Dancer" in a big ca-sonia is hissed in the streets by people who believe she was Sutherland's mistress. Schuyler comes upon her near the river bank and gently leads her away, marrying her soon afterward and showing her a better life.

This big feature play recently broke all records for two weeks at the Lyceum Theatre, Winnipeg. It will be shown at the Auditorium tomorrow and Saturday evenings and Saturday afternoon matinee.

Had Exciting Experience

Mr. K. M. Skene, of Sidney Island, had an arduous and dangerous trip last Tuesday when his launch, the "Genial" broke away from the moorings during the storm. Mr. Skene started out to rescue his launch in a small boat, but when within a few feet of it, a large wave carried it beyond his reach, and at the same time almost filling the small boat with water, causing him to take refuge on Cole Island, where he received shelter and dried his clothes. Starting out on another attempt at rescue, he found himself compelled to land at Swartz Bay, where he was accorded hospitality.

Mr. Skene arrived in Sidney on Tuesday evening none the worse for his adventure, barring sea water drinks and duckings. He rescued his launch.

SOCIAL LAST FRIDAY.

The Y. P. A. of the Union Church held a social evening in the Wesley Hall last Friday evening, when a good crowd turned out and spent a few hours playing games, etc. Miss Ella Blackburn and Miss Nancy Simister were responsible for the dainty refreshments served during the evening. This organization has recently added six new members to its roll.
